GTU at AAR/SBL

Every year on the weekend before Thanksgiving, several thousand scholars of religion gather for the annual meetings of the American Academy of Religion and the Society of Biblical Literature. When this event took place in Chicago last month, the GTU was as usual well represented. These two scholarly organizations are by no means the only ones that attract people from the GTU, but they probably do cover the widest range of disciplines and fields within theology and religious studies.

The AAR/SBL program book listed at least 32 appearances by members of our faculty, 20 by current students, and 75 by graduates. Many more of us were there to hear the papers, browse the book exhibits, attend business meetings, and work the scholarly networks. Some of our doctoral students were interviewing for jobs in the Employment Center. A highlight of the meeting was the GTU Graduate Reception on Saturday evening where we recognized the 2012 Alumna of the Year Kristen Johnston Largen (Theology Ph.D., 2002) who teaches at the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Gettysburg, PA and has recently published Baby Krishna, Infant Christ: A Comparative Theology of Salvation (Orbis, 2011).

GTU folks have frequently served in leadership positions within these organizations and their affiliates. The GTU’s first dean was Sherman Johnson (then president and dean of CDSP) who served a term as president of SBL. All of my predecessors as dean have been elected president of the AAR: John Dillenberger, Claude Welch, Judith Berling, and Margaret Miles. Our current president Jim Donahue is just finishing a term on the Theological Education Committee for AAR, and I have been appointed to take his place in that group along with our alumna Julia Watts Belser (Jewish Studies Ph.D., 2008). There are many, many others who could be named if space permitted, but I should at least mention our 2005 Alumna of the Year Laurie Zoloth (Ethics Ph.D., 1993 and Professor of Medical Humanities & Bioethics and Religion at Northwestern University) who has been elected to serve as president of the AAR in 2015.

Whenever faculty are being evaluated, the usual categories are teaching, research, and service. At the GTU, “service” is understood to include service to the institution, to the religious communities we represent, to the wider public, and to the academy. There are of course many ways of serving the academy, but active participation in scholarly professional organizations is one of the most important. Through the AAR, SBL, and other such groups, we at the GTU are connected with scholars all over the country and all around the world. We could not do the work we do without these organizations, so it is good when we are able to give something in return.

Based on the information provided, it seems that the GTU was well represented at the AAR/SBL meetings, with many appearances by faculty, students, and graduates. The GTU Graduate Reception was highlighted, with Kristen Johnston Largen being recognized as the 2012 Alumna of the Year for the AAR. The GTU has a history of serving in leadership positions within these organizations and has alumni who have been elected to serve as presidents. The AAR/SBL meetings offer opportunities for teaching, research, and service, with active participation in scholarly organizations being important.
Surjit Singh Lecture on Thurs, Feb. 21st

The 2013 Surjit Singh Lecture will be held on Thursday, February 21st, at 7:00pm. This year’s speaker is Dr. Jennifer Peace, (Ph.D. ’05), Assistant Professor of Interfaith Studies, Andover Newton Theological School (ANTS) and Director of CIRCLE (Center for Interreligious and Communal Leadership Education), a joint venture of ANTS and Hebrew College. Are you interested in becoming a theological educator? Would you like help in exploring such a vocation? The Louisville Institute, with support from Lilly Endowment, has developed a program to provide that help.

Each year we will select ten doctoral students to be Louisville Fellows. These ten students will form a cohort that will meet regularly with experienced theological educators and church leaders who will act as mentors. Louisville Fellows will learn from these mentors and from each other what it means to be a theological educator.

The benefits of being a Louisville Fellow include the following:

--An annual stipend of $2000 for a two year term;
--Three meetings per year of the cohort at Louisville Seminary, all expenses paid by the Louisville Institute—topics will include cutting edge issues facing theological education and those invested in it;
--Personal mentoring by academic and pastoral mentors— mentoring will include feedback on research in progress, counsel on the experience of being a theological doctoral student, and advice on seeking a teaching position after graduation;
--The chance to network with other students who will be future colleagues in theological education—a jumpstart to valuable contacts throughout the world of theological education;
--A lifelong fellowship with other cohorts of Louisville Fellows. Once a Louisville Fellow, always a Louisville Fellow. Each year an annual meeting will be held to which members of all Louisville Fellows cohorts over the years will be invited.

Eligibility for making application to be a Louisville Fellow includes the following:

--An interest in exploring the vocation of being a theological educator who will teach at a North American theological school;
--In the first or second year of a doctoral program in some field of theological education;
--Demonstrated excellence in coursework and research potential.

If you are interested in exploring the possibility of becoming a Louisville Fellow and want to know more about how to apply, visit the Louisville Institute website, or send questions to:

It has been almost two decades since apartheid officially ended in South Africa. Since religion has played a significant role in both the establishment and demolition of apartheid, has the end of apartheid changed how people see understand, and practice religion in the South Africa of the 21st century?
IS THERE SUCH A THING AS THE JEWISH PEOPLE: LECTURE SERIES

The Center for Jewish Studies presents a four part lecture series entitled: “Is There Such a Thing as the Jewish People: Rethinking Jewish Membership for a Global Age.” The series will be given by Noam Painko. Osher Marin JCC Visiting Scholar Noam Painko, Jewish Studies scholar, professor and author of “Zionism and the Roads Not Taken: Rawidowicz, Kaplan, Kohn” will explore probing questions about peoplehood; past, present, and future to reassess the possibilities and limitations of Jewish collectivity today. Vegetarian lunch will be provided. All four lectures will be held in Gibbs Hall, Church Divinity School of the Pacific.

The first lecture will be held on February 8th at 12PM and is entitled, “The Problem with ‘the Jewish People’”. The perceived dissolution of “Jewish Peoplehood” has emerged over the last decade in both the United States and Israel as one of the crucial issues facing Jewish life. Is the problem that Jews today have rejected their obligation to other Jews? Perhaps. But there is another possibility: existing models of Jewish membership make assumptions based on identity outdated paradigms with little practical or moral relevance in an increasingly globalized world.

THAT WAS THEN, THIS IS NOW: A MORAL AND SPIRITUAL AGENDA FOR THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH: DEC. 6TH, 7:30PM

The Church Divinity School of the Pacific invites you to "That was then, this is now: A Moral and Spiritual Agenda for the Episcopal Church" a Community Night Forum in the Tucson Common Room

The Rt. Rev. Gene Robinson will speak on changes in the moral and spiritual agenda of The Episcopal Church.

V. Gene Robinson was elected Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of New Hampshire on June 7, 2003, having served as Canon to the Ordinary (Assistant to the Bishop) for nearly 18 years. Bishop Robinson has been active particularly in the area of full civil rights for gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people. Working at the state, national, and international levels, he has spoken and lobbied for equal protection under the law and full civil marriage rights. His story is featured in the 2007 feature-length documentary, “For the Bible Tells Me So,” and his book In The Eye of the Storm: Swept to the Center by God (Seabury Books, New York) was released in 2008. Bishop Robinson was invited by Barack Obama to give the invocation at the opening presidential inaugural ceremonies at the Lincoln Memorial on Jan. 18, 2009. He is also a Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress.
We are pleased to announce a call for papers for the 3rd Annual Graduate Student Symposium at the Institute of Buddhist Studies.

Our theme this year is Buddhist Ritual, Buddhist Culture.

Buddhist ritual practices are shaped by their location and are affected by the ritual objects. How does the material world determine the ways that Buddhism is practiced? How do Buddhists use ritual objects? In turn, how does Buddhism shape these objects and transform the physical world? What is the impact, for example, on the physical world as a result of religious pilgrimage or tourism? How do Buddhists transform physical objects in the process of ritualization? This symposium will focus on these themes and will consider both historical and contemporary uses of material objects in Buddhist ritual, Buddhism's impact on cultural materials, and the relationships between Buddhism and sacred objects.

We invite graduate students to submit proposals considering one or more of these topics, either historically or contemporarily. Proposals should be no more than 200 words, and include the paper's title and the author's name, affiliation, and contact information. Please submit proposals to Courtney Bruntz at courtney.bruntz@gmail.com no later than January 31, 2013.

This year's keynote address will be delivered by Prof. Justin McDaniel of the University of Pennsylvania. His talk is generously supported by the Yehan Numata Foundation.

Important Dates:
Submission of Abstract: January 31, 2013
Notification of Proposal Result: February 15, 2013
Submission of Full Paper: April 1, 2013
Conference Event: April 13, 2013
